Subject: Solano County, Calif., launches entire suite of Network of Care Web sites for health and human services

Hello,

Solano County, Calif., just launched a comprehensive set of local, customized Web portals called the Network of Care. These innovative resources use Internet technology to help individuals and families quickly find the right service and support at the right time.

The Network of Care originated in California in the field of aging, but its success caused it to spread to Behavioral Health, Veterans, Foster Care, Public Health, Domestic Violence, Developmental Disabilities and Prisoner Reentry. Solano County is part of a recent trend for counties or states to adopt all of the subject-targeted programs to better serve their citizens.

“We need a broad initiative to move Solano’s economy forward and our Board has already committed resources to linking our residents to needed services that support our economic development,” says Linda Seifert, Solano County District 2 Supervisor. “The County’s new Network of Care website will be one of those resources where clients use self-help tools and a service directory to advance their career and access the services that help them do that.”

“Seniors told us at our summit meetings on Senior Issues that they need easily accessible information, resources and self-help tools in one convenient location,” said Jim Spering, Solano County District 3 Supervisor. “We have created the County’s Network of Care website to provide them what they asked for, because they deserve the support from all of us to thrive in their later years.”

The Network of Care includes information about all services; a huge, state-of-the-art Library; Personal Health Records; Nationwide News; Social Networking; Support and Advocacy; online assessment and recovery programs, and much more.
