Subject: Your thoughts?

Below is some info that went out to the Tech Colleges. Although State Tech found a way to cover some proctoring costs for the colleges, it looks like they will be billing the colleges 1/14th of $150,000 that State Tech committed. Hmmmmmm??? Thoughts?

If a college is not currently an ACT test site, is there a fee that the college has to pay to become one? If so, what is it?

SCC and Trident are the only ones that aren't WSPs. I know Mike wants to continue to be a "private site", which won't cost him anything. He'll just have to apply online and we've talked about it already. If either of the two colleges want to be a WSP, then there would be a cost. I'll send out an entire copy of the 70+ page contract to the partners that outlines everything. For those colleges that are WSP's, Mandy will bill the colleges what we normally bill them to keep that status.
