From: Office of the Governor Site Support
Sent: 10/8/2014 7:49:57 PM
To: Haley, Nikki
Cc:
Subject: i have an idea ma'am

Title: Loopholes
First Name: Chase
Middle Initial:D
Last Name: Goodson
Suffix:
Street Address: none at the moment
Street Address 2:
City: clover
State: SC
Zip: 29710
Phone:

Email: GoodsonChaseD@students.clover.k12.sc.us

Affiliation: Constituent Message:
this is a curious question that you may wish to hear, but have you noticed our laws in south carolina are very....time limited? at least certain ones. and as i am sitting outside in the dark, typing this message from someones wifi and have no home to go to, i have to ask myself: is it fair for me to be in this situation? I'm not a drug addict, i am passing my classes in school, and I'm a fairly nice person. but i broke some rules in my moms household and she kicked me out. what i propose, is that instead of making it legal for parents to kick their child out at 18, make it illegal to kick them out until they finish high school. now i know this sounds like "oh the kids will just keep failing school, or drop out." well, how about if a kid drops out, they aren't entitled to the law, and can be kicked out. or even if they're failing! just make it illegal to kick your teen out when they are trying to finish high school. because I'm 18, and i want to join the navy soooo bad. but i can't, because my mom kicked me out with 2 years of school left. so now ill either starve to death or run out of school options before i can do that. please help me and the other homeless teens that want to finish high school