Look what we found Saturday morning at Huntington Beach! These are no ordinary tracks, these are the "crawl" of a sea turtle after laying eggs at Huntington Beach State Park. We are looking forward to a successful nesting season at the park.

Beth Inman I have seen two turtles lay eggs while at Hunting Island and have seen a couple of other crawls. It is an awesome experience!

Larry Dillard In the late 80's I was on the north end of mb and saw a turtle that had started following tire tracks instead of her own tracks back to the ocean. She was going parallel to the surf. My date, myself and another guy that was walking along the beach got her right and back to the surf.

Anne Marie Parrott A favorite vacation pastime -- get out early AM and walk the beach -- if you see these tracks call a turtle patrol staff member . they will come and make sure the nest is high enough in the dunes . If not , they will move the eggs and mark it off . They let us name the nest we saved :) this is a great picture to reference !
