Their universe is expanding

It's the 10th season, and the lives of these brilliant buddies are still more complex than a quantum physics equation (and funnier too). Leonard and Penny tangle with family, Howard and Bernadette are having a baby, and Amy and Sheldon...well, they're being Amy and Sheldon.

He's coming home.

Sometimes the real work starts when the job ends. In his return to television, King of Queens star Kevin James plays a police officer who dreamed of retirement — only to find that his new life at home with his wife and three kids comes with its own unique challenges.

The team's back in action.

The 14th season begins with a bang when Wilmer Valderrama joins the cast as an undercover agent linked to a deadly car explosion. Gibbs is on the case, but he'll need help. Enter Alex Quinn (Jennifer Esposito), a special agent assigned to shadow his team.

The stakes are high.

Lady Justice may be blind, but apparently she can be influenced. And if anyone can do it, it's Dr. Jason Bull, a character inspired by the early career of Dr. Phil McGraw. Bull's elite trial consultants will stop at nothing to tip the scales of justice in their clients' favor.

Next-generation problem solving.

At long last, the legendary series has been rebooted — and it now features 20-something Angus "Mac" MacGyver leading a crack team within a top-secret U.S. government organization. Seemingly unsolvable problems will be solved. Lives will be saved.
