Chaney,

I wanted to reach out to the governor's office to see if Gov. Haley plans to allow naloxone, an overdose reversal medicine, to be administered in state high schools. The manufacturer of the drug, known as Narcan, announced last week its plan to offer the drug free to all U.S. high schools. Wondering if that's a go here or if there are any barriers that would prevent that. Can you advise?

Here's the press release from the drug company: <http://www.adaptpharma.com/press-releases/>
Here's a story about this being done in Pennsylvania: <http://fox43.com/2016/02/01/heroin-overdose-drug-naloxone-to-be-provided-free-to-all-pa-public-schools/>
