The verdict is finally in! We do apologize that this took a while, but our resident snake expert has been out of the office. According to him.....the snake is a Midland water snake. (Nerodia sipedon pleuralis). It's a more southern subspecies of the northern water snake, with only minute differences in color and pattern. It is non-venomous. Hope this helps!

Hi Karen! The picture is a little fuzzy, but we've asked some of our rangers and to them it looks like a copperhead snake. Hope this helps!

Karen -- another question. Where was the photo taken? Because it's a little blurry we're having some discussion on what kind of snake this is. If you could tell us that, it would be helpful.
