Danielle:

I have to say I am disappointed, but not surprised, by the response from DHEC and DNR. I do not know how the state can possibly claim to own everything seaward of the mean high tide mark and yet not accept responsibility for removing the storm related debris which is in it. This is especially true when the debris poses a hazard to the public which is entitled to use public tidelands pursuant to the Public Trust Doctrine.

We will share this information with the local media (which has a keen interest in this issue), FEMA, local, state and national elected officials.

Thanks you or all your help.

Tom:

Attached are DHEC and DNR's final opinions in response to the removal of marine debris in Beaufort County. While DHEC and DNR do not feel that they have the responsibility or ability remove the debris, they remain committed to assisting Beaufort County within their existing authorities. Should Beaufort County choose to remove the debris under its own authority, SCEMD is committed to helping the County understand FEMA's eligibility criteria and the public assistance reimbursement process. If you have any questions, please do not hesitate to contact me. Thank you.
