An Introduction to the Community

<http://community.lnwprogram.org>

Hello! With this email, Leadership for a Networked World is proud to announce the launch of our new Community @ LNW. With this new initiative we are relaunching and refocusing the Community of Practice for past and current attendees of the LNW Public Sector and Education Shared Services Summits. If you're receiving this email, you were a practitioner at a past Summit, or were a member of the previous Shared Services Community of Practice.

This new Community is about and for you, the practitioners of Shared Services. We believe strongly in the work done at the Summits, and we believe just as strongly that the conversation needs to continue year round. We've redesigned the Community to empower and enrich the member practitioners and facilitate the continuing conversation.

We have an editorial calendar of Shared Services related content lined up, and each week we'll be releasing new, relevant content to cultivate and inspire ideas, discussions and solutions.

We've created easy to use informal Discussions, which give you the ability to start a quick, off-the-cuff conversation with your fellow practitioners.

We've also enhanced and enriched the member search functions, to help you connect with practitioners who have the skills and experience you may be looking for.

We've gone in to more detail on the changes to the Community in an article on the site:

At the 2012 Shared Services Summit, Marshal Gimpel, the Former Director of the Enterprise Services Center (ESC) at the Department of Transportation presented on how the ESC met it's goals and objectives. The full video presentation, along with shorter, bite-sized clips, is available now to view on the Community. We invite you to take a look:
