As I understand it, while the bill bans all transfers, it is aimed at freezing foreign transfers (US transfers already prohibited). That being said, I support us hammering away at this issue. I would just use our standard stuff. Suggested quote below.

“I am happy the House is taking this matter seriously because President Obama appears to be doubling down on closing Guantanamo Bay, even as a recent report shows 30% of former GTMO detainees are either confirmed or suspected of reengaging in terrorist activities. Just as we have made clear that GTMO detainees should not be brought into the United States, we also shouldn’t be sending them back to the battlefield.”

Recent report I mention is attached can be found here: <https://www.dni.gov/index.php/newsroom/reports-and-publications/214-reports-publications-2016/1414-summary-of-the-reengagement-of-detainees-formerly-held-at-guantanamo-bay-cuba-2016>

David,

What is the update here, is this something we would want to weigh in on?

Wondering if the gov wanted to say anything about the US House passing the no-Gitmo detainee transfer bill today.
Thanks!
