Trump Primary Win Doesn't Sway McConnell On Garland

Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., is not backing down from his opposition to U.S. Supreme Court nominee Merrick Garland in light of Donald Trump's inevitable Republican primary win, holding firm to the view that the next president should fill the vacancy.

CFPB Unleashes Draft Rule On Arbitration Clauses

The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau released a highly anticipated proposed rule Thursday to ban consumer financial services providers from prohibiting customers, through contracts with mandatory arbitration clauses, from filing or joining class actions.

DOJ Hits NC With Warning Over Transgender 'Bathroom' Law

The U.S. Department of Justice on Wednesday sent a letter to North Carolina Gov. Pat McCrory saying the state's controversial law restricting bathroom access for transgender persons is in violation of civil rights laws prohibiting employment discrimination, according to news reports.

Pentagon Could Go Over Funding Caps By $162B, CBO Says

The money needed for the Obama administration's plans for the U.S. Department of Defense will exceed funding caps by $162 billion over the next four years if Congress rejects cost-saving proposals and weapons systems costs continue to increase as they have in the past, the Congressional Budget Office warned Tuesday.

Brexit A 'Daunting' Legal Task, UK Lawmakers Say

The U.K. faces a "complex and daunting" legal task lasting several years if the country votes to leave the European Union in a June 23 referendum, a U.K. parliamentary committee said in a report issued Wednesday.

ANALYSIS

Energy Policymakers To Watch In The House

In an ideologically divided Congress, energy-focused lawmakers are often guided as much by whether their state produces or consumes a lot of energy as by ideology. Here, experts identify the energy policy movers and shakers in the House. Yesterday, Law360 spotlighted the energy heavyweights in the Senate.

Enviros Press Case Against DOT On Oil Spill Response Plans

The National Wildlife Federation asked for a quick win Wednesday in its lawsuit over what it calls insufficient government review of pipeline operators' spill response plans, saying the U.S. Department of Transportation's top official shirked legal obligations to personally review such plans for pipelines that cross the country's inland waterways.

Calif. Agencies Unveil Zero-Emission Freight System Draft

Several California agencies on Tuesday released the first draft of their plan to reform regulations on the state's freight industry, aimed at increasing efficiency and zeroing-out carbon emissions by 2050 while keeping the $740 billion-per-year industry competitive in relation to other states'.

Enviros Launch Suit Over Outdated EPA Drilling Waste Regs

Environmental groups on Wednesday sued the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency in D.C. federal court for failing to update its rules for oil and gas drilling waste disposal, claiming the agency has shirked its regulatory obligations for three decades even as advances in hydraulic fracturing have sparked a U.S. energy boom.

Chicago Mayor Pins Lucas Museum Hopes On 7th Circ.

Chicago Mayor Rahm Emanuel is asking the Seventh Circuit to step in and dismiss a lawsuit challenging the location of an upcoming museum dedicated to the art collection of "Star Wars" creator George Lucas, saying Wednesday that the city can't abide any further delays as Lucas threatens to take his business elsewhere.

EXPERT ANALYSIS

Gig Economy: Are Your Workers Employees? The 6-Part Test

Unfortunately, many sharing economy companies have tried to have it both ways — benefiting from the cost savings of calling workers independent contractors while at the same time treating them as employees in most other respects. Guidance from the U.S. Department of Labor suggests that many of these companies have misclassified their workers as independent contractors, say Rachel Bien and Cara Chomski of Outten & Golden LLP.

The Deemed Export Rule And Employment Nondiscrimination

For employers that are caught between complying with export control laws and anti-discrimination laws, the U.S. Department of Justice recently issued guidance to help companies navigate these seemingly contradictory requirements. But, while helpful in some areas, the guidance may add to the confusion in other areas, say John Burke and Sabrina Shadi at BakerHostetler LLP.

Treasury Regs Cause Issues For 'Lonely' Life Insurance Cos.

New proposed U.S. Department of the Treasury regulations on whether a domestic life insurance company may join in filing a consolidated U.S. federal income tax return with one or more domestic nonlife insurance companies could create new problems with respect to recently acquired domestic life insurance companies that are not allowed to join in the consolidated return, say attorneys at Sutherland Asbill & Brennan LLP.

Time To Stop The End-Arounds In Muni Market Regulation

The Municipal Securities Rulemaking Board recently issued a concept release suggesting that market transparency trumps the Tower Amendment — the direct congressional prohibition against federal regulations requiring filing of information by municipal issuers. This expansion of regulatory reach by tip-toeing around statutory prohibitions disserves us all, says Thomas Potter III of Burr & Forman LLP.

4 Questions To Ask Before A Firm Merger

Taking target practice blindfolded is likely to end in disaster. Likewise, senior partners considering a law firm merger must be sure they are shooting at a target that advances the firm's goals before they pull the trigger. Here, Law360 looks at four questions attorneys should be asking when considering or executing a merger.

How To Score The Best Non-Ivy Talent

Many successful BigLaw partners did not attend an Ivy League or top-tier law school, yet some firms insist on focusing their resources on recruiting from a tiny handful of prestigious alma maters. Here, find out how to bag the best and brightest associates by broadening your talent search.

Invitees To High Court Amici Party Aren't A Diverse Bunch

A recent paper examining amicus invitations from the U.S. Supreme Court found that a majority of invitations were issued to former law clerks and that women and minorities have largely been excluded, revealing a court that has become "increasingly insular and cloistered."

Law Firms To GCs: Want Change? Push Harder

At the Corporate Legal Operations Consortium's inaugural conference in San Francisco, the message coming from legal department operations executives and law firms is one and the same: Law firms are ripe for change, but it won't happen unless clients ask for it.

Sidley Austin Atty's Anti-Trump Crusade Draws Fans, Mockery

Daniel A. McLaughlin, counsel at Sidley Austin LLP in New York, has stitched together an impressive resume: Veteran securities litigator. Widely published writer. Politically conservative mega-critic of Donald Trump and unwilling viral sensation on Twitter.
