Edingsville: The Lowcountry Atlantis

Now a distant memory, the island village of Edingsville was once a summer resort for citizens of Charleston and Edisto Island. Established in 1824, the island was approximately $\frac{3}{4}$ of a mile off of Edisto's current coastline. Families moved their belongings to the island each summer to avoid the humidity and bugs of the inland towns. In 1893, a hurricane destroyed the island, scattering belongings into the ocean. To this day, these marvelous pieces still wash up along our coastline at Edisto Beach!

Missy Malatesta Yes I've read about this in a book about Edisto. It had pictures of people on the beach in horse and buggy carriages. You know it's my favorite beach at Edisto! !
