

 HANDSOMER  SHARPER  LESS EXPENSIVE HARRY'S SHOP NOW

U.S. Home Crime Terrorism Economy Immigration Disasters Military Education Environment Personal Freedoms
Regions

TERROR
US group CAIR named terrorist organization by United Arab Emirates

By Perry Chiamonte
Published November 17, 2014
FoxNews.com

 2713  448  105

A U.S.-based pro-Muslim group that enjoys close ties with the Obama administration has landed on one Arab nation's list of terrorist organizations.

The Council on American-Islamic Relations (CAIR) was one of 82 groups around the world designated terrorist organizations by the United Arab Emirates, placing it in the company of Al Qaeda, Islamic State and others. While CAIR has previously been linked to Hamas, it has held hundreds of meetings with White House officials on a wide range of community issues and has sought to present itself as a mainstream Muslim organization.

"We call on the United Arab Emirates cabinet to review this list and remove organizations such as CAIR, the Muslim American Society (MAS) and other civil society organizations that peacefully promote civil and democratic rights and that oppose terrorism whenever it occurs, wherever it occurs and whoever carries it out," CAIR wrote in a statement on its Facebook page, which also called its inclusion on the UAE list a "bizarre move."

"Whereas they appear in our media and meet with our officials, the UAE views them as extremists unworthy of being treated as representatives of Muslims."

- Ryan Mauro, The Clarion Project

Despite its good standing in Washington, CAIR has had its share of controversy. In 2007, the organization was named along with 300 others as an unindicted co-conspirator in a case regarding funding to extremist group Hamas. Its critics have long accused the group of having ties to groups like the Muslim Brotherhood and Hamas.

Some terrorism experts applauded the UAE's designation, saying CAIR is an arm of the Muslim Brotherhood.

"The United Arab Emirates could have banned the Muslim Brotherhood and left it at that," Ryan Mauro, a national security analyst for the Clarion Project, told FoxNews.com. "Instead, they went the extra mile to call out major Brotherhood affiliates in Europe and the U.S. The point that the UAE is making is that the Brotherhood operates in the West and it is worried about these affiliates' influence on Western policy.

"Federal prosecutors have explicitly named CAIR and MAS as Muslim Brotherhood entities, yet the UAE is expressing more public concern about this than the U.S. does," Mauro added. "Whereas they appear in our media and meet with our officials, the UAE views them as extremists unworthy of being treated as representatives of Muslims."

CAIR spokesman Ibrahim Hooper said his organization, as well as other Muslims who are against terrorism, are often unfairly portrayed

"Obama provided examples of religious leaders engaged in the ideological fight against extremism, quoting a Muslim sheikh who said, 'We must declare war on war, so the outcome will be peace upon peace,'" Hooper said. "That sheikh is Abdullah bin Bayyah, a 79-year-old cleric who, even though lauded on the world stage for his recent efforts at peacemaking, is dogged by controversy over connections to the Muslim Brotherhood."

The UAE's list was likely to ratchet up the pressure on the Muslim Brotherhood by lumping it together with extremists such as the Islamic State and Al Nusra, Al Qaeda's affiliate in Syria.

The move follows a decision by Saudi Arabia in March to designate the Brotherhood a terrorist group along with Al Qaeda and others. The Emirates voiced support for the decision at the time, and accused Islamist groups of trying to topple its Western-backed ruling system.

Saudi Arabia and the UAE have taken a firm stance against the Muslim Brotherhood since its ascendance in Egypt in the wake of the Arab Spring, and the oil-rich Gulf neighbors are strong supporters of Egyptian President Abdel-Fattah el-Sissi. He was elected earlier this year after leading the military overthrow of Islamist President Mohammed Morsi, a member of the Muslim Brotherhood.

Officials at the U.S. State Department did not immediately return comment when asked about the UAE's designation list.

The Associated Press contributed to this story.

SPONSORED STORIES YOU MAY LIKE

10 Hottest Women From Around The World

Lost Waldo

A Rich Woman Abandoned This Apartment In 1942. What They Just Found Inside...

BoredLion

Unmanned U.S. Navy Vessels Can Now Swarm, Overwhelm Hostile Vessels

Dailymotion

'Sons of Anarchy' creator Kurt Sutter has Something Important to Say About...

Copyright Alliance

Recommended by

Also on the Web

- Lisa Bloom: Bill Cosby allegations seem credible, though we'll never see them in court (NakedLaw)
- Surfers beat tech billionaire in California beach case (Fortune)
- World War II Vet Returns To France 60 Years Later To Realize He's Become A European Legend (Tagroom)
- Father Stones Daughter to Death in Public "Honor Killing" (Makers by ACL)
- The Most Awkward Family Photos. #7 Is Priceless (ViewMixed)
- Family Physician Hired a Hit Man to Silence Her...Permanently (The Medical Bag)

More from Fox News

- Russia arrives at G-20 with warships (World)
- You don't protect my freedom: Our childish insistence on calling soldiers heroes deadens real democracy (Fox & Friends)
- The Dirty Little Secrets of Gift Cards (Personal Finance)
- At least 4 dead in attack in Kabul, official says (World)
- Fracking to occur in East Coast's largest forest (U.S.)
- 2 women convicted in beating death of woman outside California club to be sentenced (U.S.)

Recommended by

Comments

click here to join the discussion

9.5k 448 38 2
Like Tweet +1 Share

Watch now...

University of Illinois considers rehiring convicted murderer

School shooter drill terrifies students, staff

Government's secret spying program targets phones