

From: Law360 In-Depth <news-q@law360.com>
To: Adams, ChaneyChaneyAdams@gov.sc.gov
Date: 9/6/2016 2:23:31 PM
Subject: Transgender Bathroom Battles Could Mark Turning Point For LGBT Rights

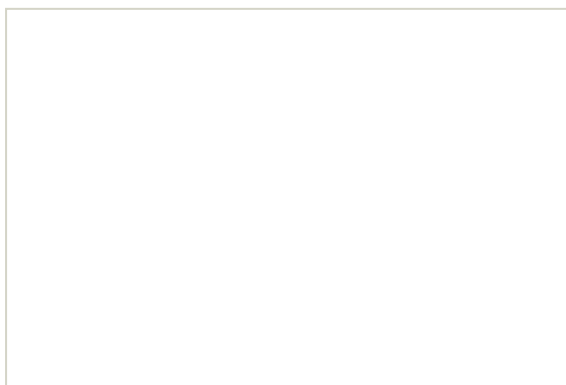

Feature

Transgender Bathroom Battles Could Mark Turning Point For LGBT Rights

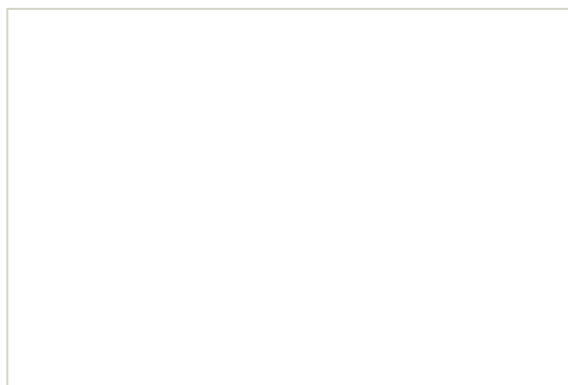

By Natalie Rodriguez

Litigation over transgender bathroom rights is moving toward the Supreme Court, presenting questions that could cause the justices to decide whether federal anti-discrimination laws apply to LGBT people.

Feature

News Analysis

Ruled Out: Has The Supreme Court Set The Patent-Eligibility Bar Too High?

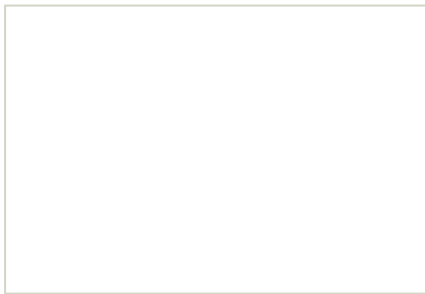

By Erin Coe

A string of high court rulings on Section 101 of the Patent Act has left behind a sea of invalidated patents, leading to calls for a legislative fix and fears that innovators will take their business overseas.

Waiting Game: Is There Light At End Of Tunnel For Judge Garland?

By Max Stendahl

Experts say Merrick Garland will likely be the next Supreme Court justice. It just may take a while.

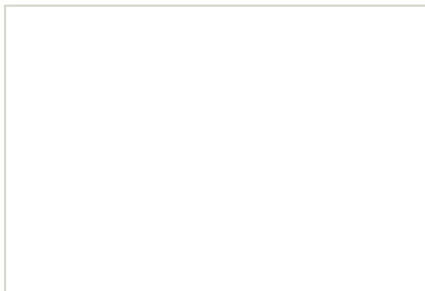

Sidebar

Dan Abrams On Time Travel Via History And Fiction

By Cara Salvatore

In a recent 10-minute interview, ABC News anchor Dan Abrams talked about his fascination with time travel, getting his reluctant kid to attend swim class, and Thurgood Marshall's confirmation hearings.

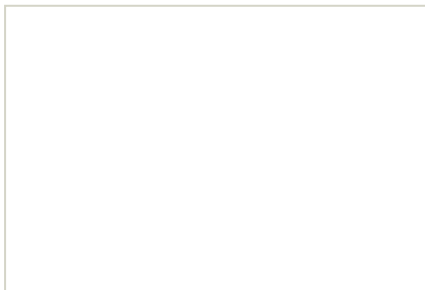

Secret Lives of Lawyers

Irwin Fritchie's Dow Edwards Sews The Mardi Gras Spirit

By John Kennedy

New Orleans attorney Dow Edwards can often be found with a needle and thread, hunkered over an elaborate feathered and beaded costume — the price of admission to perform as one of the city's famed Mardi Gras Indians.

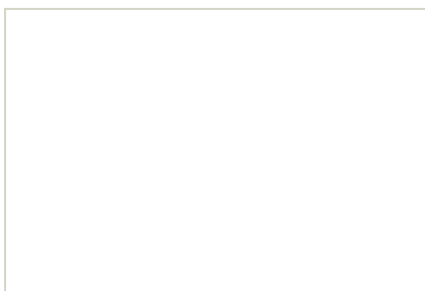

You Can Quote Me On That

The Best In Legal Talk

Languishing Legalese, Occupy Sidewalk, Voter ID

By Richard McVay

Legal minds since our last edition talked about moral turpitude, biblical burglary and the DMV. Here are the best lines from the legal world.

Op-Ed

Student Loan Forgiveness Rules Are Essential To Protect Taxpayers

By Ray E. Gallo, Gallo LLP

Professor Anthony Caso's recent op-ed — "No Good Reason For New Student Loan Forgiveness Rules" — reveals more about his own interests and politics than the interests of the country, or even the educational establishment. His choice of terminology, advocacy for forced arbitration, and antipathy for contingency fees make his piece sound like U.S. Chamber of Commerce propaganda.

Op-Ed

We're Not Ready For Cyberterrorism

By James Harrington, Robins Kaplan LLP

The potential exists for cyberterrorists to cripple the networks that enable our planes to fly, our power plants to keep the lights on, our water companies to pump clean water, our energy companies to distribute oil and gas, and our cities to keep the traffic lights working. Governments and corporations are scrambling to protect their systems, but the risk is enormous.

Not sure if your firm subscribes? Ask your librarian.

We hope you found this message to be useful.

However, if you'd rather not receive future emails of this sort,
you may unsubscribe here.

Please DO NOT reply to this email. For customer support inquiries, please call 1-646-783-7100 or visit our Contact Us page.

Law360 | Portfolio Media, Inc, 111 West 19th Street, 5th Floor, New York, NY 10011