Subject: a question for INdustry Week piece

Chaney, am hoping you can help us out. Would like to add a list of companies that Gov Haley has brought into South Carolina. We ran the two pieces on Kent Bicycles and we have others in the hopper, but we think the interview with the Governor would be nicely augmented with a full list. Is this something you could please forward? thanks much. tricia moody

Tricia,

I spoke with Beth this morning and I'm so sorry I am just getting back to you, I have been having issues with mail going to my spam folder.

I have just a few edits to what you sent over.

Under the question: What is South Carolina doing to help meet manufacturers' workforce requirements?

Continental is German
It is Giti Tire not PT Tire

Under the question: Going forward do you see other government/industry collaborations that will help grow more suppliers - first, second, third tier - in this very competitive high volume manufacturing space?

The NLRB and Washington union bosses went after Boeing not North Carolina
Tore is spelt Toray Industries

Other than these few changes everything looks great.

Please let me know if you need anything else and if you don't mind could you send us a copy of the article when it is finished?

Chaney

Chaney, that was fabulous! Thank you so much for setting up this interview - so much to cover - great stories.

As follow up will be looking for photos to represent all the new sites Gov Haley mentioned - BMW, Boeing, etc. - to include with the piece.

Also the governor mentioned the flat screen Element start-up and said would have someone - Ross? - connect me with them.

Anything else you want to forward would love it.

thanks much. tricia

Chaney for phone call today with the governor at 11:10 Eastern, wanted to forward the questions for her in advance. Since we have 10 minutes wanted to focus in on a couple mfg points, especially on questions #1, #2, #3 and #5. All for now.

Shall I call you or will you be calling here at 9785267348 at 11:10?

1. what is SC doing to help with workforce requirements?
2. Going forward do you see other government/industry collaborations that will help grow more suppliers - first, second, third tier - in this very competitive high volume manufacturing space?
3. At this point in SC's growth in industrialization, how do you compare SC to other industry centers, such as Tennessee,

Ohio, etc. What makes SC different from other possible re-shoring sites?.

4. Mr. Kamler and I have talked about the upcoming challenges for Kent going hi-volume in the US with American suppliers. Is the SC government involved in helping businesses like Mr. Kamler's to look at automation and other technology challenges that build competitive advantage

5. In high volume, lower margin businesses, gov regulations, taxes, etc., can put an additional burden on new or re-shoring industries. Can you speak to this question?

Chaney, thinking two pieces, the first one Walmart and Kent, we have deadline of Jan 16 to the editor - and for this first piece, the Walmart and Kent one, we could slip in a couple quotes from the governor and a photo of her with the quotes - prefer one environmental photo, say in a factory or near machines, of governor..

But for the second piece, bigger one, that am forming now, working title Re-industrialization - we have more time, say 4 wks or so, by wk 3 January, or before, would be good. This piece more in depth, more focus on suppliers, would like to address all the questions below, open to other questions as well. Would need some nice statistics to show readers the challenge of Re-Industrialization.

Thank you.

Good morning, Chaney,

Was referred to your office by Beth Davis Webb, to whom had written on the recommendation of Arnold Kamler Chairman of Kent Bicycles.

Am working on story series for Association for Manufacturing Excellence's Target magazine about Made in America, reshoring and Re-Industrialization, have some questions for Governor Haley. Also write for Industry Week and if at some point we can run a short piece there - particularly interested in how manufacturers will re-acquire good suppliers in N. America, especially SC, Tennessee, etc.

If you will scroll down you will see the questions in a previous email.

Would appreciate your help with these questions. Am open to others as well, but would especially like to include Governor Haley's insights- can do phone interview this week or next.

Thanks much, appreciate your help. best, tricia moody

Hi Patricia,

Thanks so much for your message. I think the world of Mr. Kamler and appreciate him connecting us. If you will direct your questions to Chaney Adams, our Press Secretary, she will be helpful in getting them answered. Her email is chaneyadams@gov.sc.gov. I have let her know that they are coming.

Best of luck in composing your story.

Beth

These are the questions I would like some help on as part of an article I am doing about Walmart's re-shoring efforts. Please know that we think that Governor Haley and South Carolina are doing are great but I do have a lot of questions that I would like some help with as follows. Also would love to get some actual quotes from the Governor.

1. what is SC doing to help with workforce requirements?
2. Going forward do you see other government/industry collaborations that will help grow more suppliers - first, second, third tier - in this very competitive high volume manufacturing space?

Beth, I know this is a lot to ask and really appreciate any help you can give to me. I have attached my bio for your reference.
