Subject: Re: Kiev's Bluff: Yatsenyuk's Ultimatum over Ukraine's Debt to Russia

Dear Friend,

The US government is not the only snake in the grass. More specifically the IMF as supported by our government is likely behind this with games to keep a lid on the international debt crisis. It is likely the IMF is willing to back bad loans from more than Franklyn Templeton as the IMF probably told some of our private investors they should invest in Ukraine. Another example that we did not learn from our own home loan problem a few years ago and are now trying the same game on an international level. Maybe they think the American voter is too stupid to connect the dots.

What should we do:

1. Do not position US tax payers to guarantee any of these loans from defaulting countries.
 2. Advise the IMF not to play politics with the free market financial system.
 3. Elect a President and Congress that sees this game for what it is:
- The creation of a bubble that can be handled earlier and more easily before it becomes so large that more countries are effected.
