USDA Announces Final Rule
for Conservation of Private Grazing
Land Program

The 2002 Farm Bill authorized the U.S. Department of Agriculture to provide technical assistance from the Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) to owners and managers of private grazing land through the Conservation of Private Grazing Land Program (CPGL). The final rule for the program was published in the Federal Register on Nov. 12.

"This is a voluntary program that addresses natural resource concerns on private grazing land while enhancing the economic and social stability of grazing land enterprises and the rural communities that depend on them," said South Carolina NRCS State Conservationist Walter W. Douglas. "This rule builds our capacity to provide technical assistance to those who own and operate private grazing land."

Through CPGL, NRCS conservationists will help individuals understand the basic ecological principals associated with managing their land and implement a conservation plan that meets their management objectives and the needs of the resources—soil, water, air, plants and animals.

NRCS technical assistance can help landowners maintain and improve private grazing land and its management, implement grazing land management technologies, protect and improve the quality and quantity of water, maintain and improve wildlife and fish habitat, enhance recreational opportunities, maintain and improve the aesthetic character of private grazing land, identify opportunities and encourage diversification, and encourage the use of sustainable grazing systems.

Although financial assistance is not available from CPGL, other federal, state and local programs may apply to grazing lands that provide financial assistance.

The 2002 Farm Bill represents an unprecedented investment in conservation on America's private lands--nearly $13 billion over the next six years. Detailed information on CPGL and other conservation programs authorized in the 2002 Farm Bill is available on the Web at <http://www.nrcs.usda.gov/programs/farmbill/2002/products.html>.

USDA Seeks Comments
on Farm and Ranch Lands
Protection Program

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Natural Resources Conservation Service is seeking public comments on the Farm and Ranch Lands Protection Program (FRPP), formerly known as the Farmland Protection Program (FPP). The 2002 Farm Bill amended the program and a proposed rule was published in the Federal Register on Oct. 29, 2002.

"While the name of the program has changed to more accurately reflect that both farms and ranches are eligible for assistance, the program's purpose, which is to protect prime, unique and important soil from conversion to nonagricultural uses through the purchase of conservation easements, remains the same," said South Carolina NRCS State Conservationist Walter W. Douglas.

The proposed rule establishes eligibility criteria, state ranking considerations and guidelines for program administration. USDA encourages written comments on the proposed rule from individuals as well as governmental agencies and non-governmental organizations during the 60-day comment period. The proposed rule can be viewed at <http://www.nrcs.usda.gov/programs/farmbill/2002/FBRules.html>.

Christmas Gift Ideas
from South Carolina Agriculture

Every year about this time, we thrust ourselves into a holiday frenzy. We fret about decorating our homes and puzzle over what to get our loved ones and friends for Christmas gifts. Never fear---South Carolina agriculture has all the answers!

Starting with the dinner table, agriculture provides everything from the turkey and dressing to pecan pie and ice cream. Without agriculture, there would be no wreath on the door or poinsettias around the hearth. And, there would be no fresh, green Christmas tree to shelter those special gifts.

To get into the holiday spirit, start with a Christmas tree from one of the many marketers in the state, including our own State Farmers Markets in Columbia, Florence, and Greenville. You'll find their locations listed on this page. Or, stop by your nearest roadside market. If you missed the list in the November 21st issue of the Market Bulletin, check out the SC Christmas Tree Growers Association directory on line at <http://www.scchristmastrees.org/>.

For a Christmas gift to remember, arrange a few specialty products in a basket or an unusual container like a tin pail or terra cotta flowerpot. Be creative! Use your imagination!

Speaking of specialty products---check out our list of items listed in this issue of the Market Bulletin. You'll find soups and sauces; dips and dressings; grits and rice; and South Carolina wines and other unique beverages like Blenheim's Ginger Ale and Windy Hill Orchard apple cider. From the traditional to the unusual, you'll find everything from hams, quail, and squab to free range chicken, emu, and ostrich.

South Carolina specialty producers and processors also offer gourmet butters; cookies, crackers, and pumpkin chips; pecans, popcorn, and peanuts; cane syrup and honey; jams, jellies, and relishes; and wonderful confections like fruitcakes, pralines, and taffy. For a touch of the unique, look for novelties like peach leather and Carolina pluff mud.

One of the best gifts is something delicious from your own oven made with South Carolina's own Adluh flour. If you don't want to make up your own bundle of goodies, let Class Acts in Mt. Pleasant, Carolina Cones and Baskets in Dillon, Four Oaks Farm or Faithful Foods in Lexington, and Carolina Food Pros of Charleston do it for you.

One more special item to include on your list is our own Market Bulletin. For only $10, you can provide an informative gift twice a month for the entire year. Now, that's a bargain!

Since South Carolina agriculture brings us many of the joys of Christmas, make sure to pause during the hustle and bustle and give thanks for those bountiful blessings. And, make sure that you buy a South Carolina grown Christmas tree and order your specialty products to enhance your holiday season. "Yule" be glad you did!!!

Please remember the true meaning of Christmas.
Happy Holidays to you and yours!

Christmas Tree
Growers Gear Up for the Holiday Season

Most South Carolina Christmas tree farms will be opening on Thanksgiving Day with expectations for a very busy weekend following the holiday. Some farms may open earlier this year because there are only three weekends before Christmas, instead of the usual four.

Each season, families pile into old pick-up trucks and take the time to drive out to a Christmas tree farm. Why? Because it's part of an age-old Christmas tradition!

"To me, with all the uncertainty of Iraq and terrorism; people are not cocooning themselves, but going back to more traditional things," said Chip Fink of Mystic Tree Farm in Greenville. "They want the traditional Christmas tree experience of going out, picking a tree, and cutting it down."

Fink also noted that bugs should not deter consumers from investing in a live Christmas tree, as many farms take measures to rid the trees of bugs.

Another primary reason that South Carolinians venture out to local Christmas tree farms is the high quality of the trees themselves. Locally grown Christmas trees are resilient and long lasting because they're fresher. Christmas tree choices in South Carolina include, Leyland Cypress, White Pine, Virginia Pine, Eastern Red Cedar, and Carolina Sapphire. Many tree farms offer a wide selection of fresh cut Fraser fir, which can rarely be grown in South Carolina because they require a colder climate to grow well. Most farms also provide a variety of fresh wreaths and garland.

Holiday Season

Trees that are still connected to their roots when purchased are fresh and full of water and more likely to last through the holidays. The South Carolina Christmas Association's president, Tom Sawyer, urges everyone to give a gift to the environment this holiday season and buy a REAL Christmas tree. In using a natural tree, you don't waste the energy and non-renewable resources consumed in the production of artificial trees. Real trees are not only a wonderful tradition, but they provide a gift to nature as well.

There are nearly 150 Christmas tree farms in South Carolina. For additional information regarding these farms, please contact the SC Christmas Tree Association at 803-892-3662 or visit the association's web site at www.scchristmastrees.org
