Subject: Re: draft news release

Also, Alford reported that 60 shelters were on standby. I think that is important to show the level of capacity we are prepared to execute if needed.

Alford reporter 32 general population shelters open (two that allowed pets) and nine special needs shelters open.

Once that is resolved, I am good with it. Thank you.

Columbia, S.C. (Wednesday, October 5, 2016) – The South Carolina Response Team today announced the opening of shelters across the state for residents and visitors who are evacuating from coastal areas as Hurricane Matthew approaches. Shelters began opening on Wednesday, October 5, and as of 3 PM there are 26 shelters open.

Shelters are generally the place of last resort. Individuals and families are encouraged to have emergency plans in place. These plans should include relatives or friends with whom you can stay or locations to which you will travel. In the event that you must use a shelter, there are two types: General Population and Special Medical Needs Shelters. Only individuals with special medical needs and their caregivers will be admitted to SMNS.

Be sure to make arrangement for your pets; pets are not allowed in official shelters.

The Department of Social Services is designated as the lead agency for coordinating mass care operations. In particular, DSS works with the American Red Cross, Salvation Army, the Department of Health and Environmental Control and other state agencies and volunteer relief organizations in disaster situations to coordinate the capability to meet basic human needs (shelter, food, bulk distribution of emergency relief supplies, disaster welfare inquiries, and emergency social services).
