Frankly, my hard data is thin so I hope Marcia can help in that area. This goes back to the point I tried to make on Tuesday about not having the facts to back up a set of subjective recommendations. Without an additional level of detailed work, I feel as though I only have a weak indication of what's possible rather than a solid defensible argument hence the lack of meat.

FYI: Voight Shealy is the current President of the National Association of State Procurement Officials or NASPO. I would assume they'd be tuned into the latest efforts by different state agencies. For instance they have a seemingly effective program called Sates helping States where one SPO helps another SPO tackle issues using experience and resources from another state. Check out this link for details: <http://www.naspo.org/about/shs.cfm>.

Marcia, just add to the document I sent and send it back to me when you get a chance. If you have additional detail let it fly.

Thanks,

Sean

I know this is just an opening salvo to get something on paper so am hoping we can get some more meat on the bone in terms of details, etc....some vignettes examples from other states, other agencies in SC, or the private sector, etc. Maybe more recommendations as well when Marcia gets a chance to dig in.

I threw in some notes in the document. Also looks like we have more time (pushing back release 2-3 weeks) and may need to cancel next Tuesday's meeting....will know soon.

Okay, here's a draft. As you will see I'm long on words and short on dollars. Although, I think Marica might be able to add some dollar detail to this set of recommendations.

Anyway, you guys take a look and send me any thoughts you have.

Gratize,

Sean
