No worries Taron, one of your staff should do!
Could you please send the contact information to Brad
So we get the staffers linked in?

Hi all, this is something really significant that I have been working on at AEI. I hope you can take time in your busy schedules to at least view the webcast or come in person to DC! I believe it is a real way forward for child welfare, not tied to class action litigation. Best, Maura

Preventing harm to children through predictive analytics

Friday, January 22, 2016 | 9:00 AM — 12:00 PM

AEI, Twelfth Floor | 1150 Seventeenth Street, NW | Washington, DC 20036

Leaders in predictive analytics discuss its promise in reducing harm to children and the challenges it faces forward.

DESCRIPTION

Abused children are among the most vulnerable populations in America. The harm they suffer carries lifelong implications. Yet prevention remains difficult for social services agencies: Hundreds of children still die each year in the hands of caregivers.

This conference will discuss predictive analytics, an important new innovation that uses caseload data to identify which children are at highest risk and allows child welfare agencies to direct resources accordingly. This approach has been successfully implemented in some agencies but is still relatively new.

Join AEI for a discussion of how this innovative approach can be applied at the state level, with presenters from organizations responsible for developing these models, state child welfare commissioners, and the chair of the Commission to Eliminate Child Abuse and Neglect Fatalities.

Join the conversation on social media with @AEI on Twitter and Facebook.
