Services Exports Support Nearly 1.5 Million South Carolina Jobs

America's services sector generated $710 billion in exports in 2014, supporting millions of American jobs, including nearly 1.5 million jobs in South Carolina. Since 2006, South Carolina has seen a rise in overall services exports – boosting state economic growth and jobs, and contributing to the overall U. S. services trade surplus, which reached over $200 billion in 2013.

To help ensure that America's services companies are able to compete effectively now and in the future, Congress must pass Trade Promotion Authority legislation.

The Coalition of Services Industries (CSI) represents the interests of the dynamic American service economy, which employs over 75% of the workforce and generates three-fourths of national economic output. Since 1982, CSI has created greater public awareness of the major role services play in the U.S. economy, and it has shaped domestic and international economic policies on behalf of the services sector. The broad range and diversity of the U.S. service economy is reflected in CSI's membership, which includes major international companies from the banking, insurance, telecommunications, information technology, logistics and express delivery, audiovisual, retail, and other service industries. CSI members conduct business in all 50 states and in more than 100 countries.
