South Carolina State Parks

at 12:03:12 on 3/31/2021 UTC

Hey South Carolinians! Have you seen this pretty little yellow flower growing in the woods, in our parks and along the roads as you travel? It's your state flower — the yellow jessamine! Look all around you. It's blooming now! Just a tidbit of SC symbols & emblems for you this morning!

at 16:10:28 on 3/31/2021 UTC

Teresa New Think it's pretty but can really take over in places U don't want it to be but respect it being our State flower

at 16:18:58 on 3/31/2021 UTC

Joyce Porter Beautiful

at 17:15:13 on 3/31/2021 UTC

Micki Whitler I love it. I have lots on the trees behind our house.

at 17:25:41 on 3/31/2021 UTC

Janie Ball Hanks I want one

at 18:09:41 on 3/31/2021 UTC

Lisa Gibbons As a non-native South Carolina resident I used to think these were pretty until I discovered they are neurotoxic if ingested; the whole plant is toxic flower, vine and root. Pretty important info if you have pets, livestock, or tiny humans. Ripped it out of my backyard can't risk it with my nutty dog. Grows like a weed and chokes my trees climbing them.

at 18:31:25 on 3/31/2021 UTC

Courtney Dunn Friday Laurie Dunn

at 18:49:12 on 3/31/2021 UTC

Ken Cook Some of us confuse yellow jessamine (Trachelospermum jaminoides) with Carolina Jasmine (Gelsemium sempervivrens). The confusion is easy to understand since Yellow Jessamine can also be referred to as Carolina Jasmine and Star Jasmine). It's confusing but your friends at Clemson Extension Horticulture can keep you straight.

at 19:25:40 on 3/31/2021 UTC

Ken Cook This is Carolina Jasmine. See how it can be confused?

at 19:29:44 on 3/31/2021 UTC

Pam Cook Eddie Stanley

at 20:07:58 on 3/31/2021 UTC

Lainey Head Lee Pretty but do not put it in your yard. It will choke your other plants and take over. We keep pulling it up and it will show up somewhere else. Sometimes it comes up again a good way from the original plant.

at 20:31:26 on 3/31/2021 UTC

Florence Barresi Flynn Karen DeVries LoL. I didn't know!

at 20:41:21 on 3/31/2021 UTC
