Marsha Fagerstrom For those who live in the North, that's good news. Our winters in SC are a lot more bearable and seem so short compared to when I lived in Chicago. Having said that, I can't wait for the Bradford Pears and Dogwoods to blossom!

Manda Lisa Stokes Phil the groundhog stepped out of his cosy little house to the roar and applause of the thousands of American who have gathered to witness the prophetic rodent. Folklore legends surrounding the mystical groundhog stipulate that if Phil sees his shadow today, he is spooked into returning to his burrow, thus predicting another six weeks of winter. Unfortunately for Phil, Pennsylvania and the rest of the US, the rodent "told" his trustworthy inner-circle of tuxedo-clad men that another six weeks of bitter cold are at hand.

The Ground Hog Day announcer cheerfully said: "Up early this morning. Far from home. Are you searching for the Phil-osopher's stone? Well, even my best friends, they don't know. Is it an early spring or just more snow.

"My faithful followers, your hands (and my paws) are getting cold so here is my forecast. Not lead, but solid gold: I see my royal Shadow! Six more weeks of Winter to go!"
