

From: Self, Jamie <jself@thestate.com>
To: Adams, ChaneyChaneyAdams@gov.sc.gov
Date: 9/12/2016 2:30:17 PM
Subject: Ed questions for governor

The governor has not been supportive of a statewide plan for funding public education. I asked her about this during the 2014 governor's race.

I'm wondering where she stands now, if she's changed her mind.

Specifically, would she support a statewide property tax -- like what has been proposed in the legislature and by various education groups in the past -- that would allow tax benefits from corporations to flow to all districts instead of just going to districts where they're located?

She didn't mention any in our interview several months ago, but does the governor have any other proposals upcoming to address public education issues?

Best,

Jamie

--

Jamie Self
Government reporter
The State, Columbia
Covering: Gov. Nikki Haley, S.C. GOP & K-12 education
@jamiemself
office: 803-771-8658