It's an exciting time to be in Georgia. A record number of companies expanded or relocated last year, including Coca-Cola, Novelis, Sony Ericsson, and GE Energy. Site selection consultants continue to give the state's business environment a big "thumbs up." Georgia has extended its brand throughout the world, outpacing its competitors as the best choice for business investment.

Governor Deal understands that economic development is a No. 1 priority. "From the start," Deal says, "my main goal has been creating jobs for Georgians. However, we are not looking to the taxpayer to fund new positions. The growth and stability of our job base must come from private businesses."

As an example of the strength and stability Georgia brings to the table, the country's three credit rating agencies recently gave a triple-A rating to the state's bonds. According to Fitch Investors Service, the AAA rating reflects "conservative debt management, a proven willingness and ability to support fiscal balance, and a diversified economy. Despite economic weakness during the recession, the state's economy has grown rapidly and diversified over time."

Why Participate?

Fortune reaches a powerful and growing audience of 4.4 million business readers—59% are top corporate decision-makers. This special feature will focus on companies and organizations with Georgia operations, and will include interviews with state leaders who will discuss how the business, economic, and cultural climate in Georgia has helped them prosper.

The Fortune "Fastest Growing Companies" is among the most widely read issues of the year. It is also a top newsstand performer. As such, it offers participants in the Georgia special section a large, attentive audience.
