1. Incident Name: FEMA-4241-DR-SC	2. Operational Period: Date From: 10/17/2015 Date To: 10/18/2015 Time From: 08:00 A.M. Time To: 08:00 A.M.
Weather  Record rainfall and subsequent riverine flooding significantly impacted South Carolina. The highest precipitation totals were recorded in a geographical area from Colleton County northward to Horry County and continuing back to the west in the Midlands and Pee Dee regions. Many areas saw rainfall amounts greater than 15 inches with locally heavier amounts measuring greater than 26 inches. The overall weather pattern also produced higher than normal tides, coastal flooding, beach erosion, gusty winds that downed trees, earthen dam failure, and river flooding. Cascading effects increased the overall impact in areas already inundated by rainfall. A second round of widespread precipitation fell Saturday October 10. Locally heavier amounts were recorded in the same areas impacted earlier in the week. Flash flooding occurred in several counties, but did not significantly contribute to riverine flooding. The additional rainfall did cause issues for roadways, streams, and dams. Rainfall is not in the forecast for the next seven days. As South Carolina moves into the recovery phase, there remains a river flooding and unexpected dam failure life safety hazard. The river flood threat is ending in the Midlands and shifting downstream toward coastal counties. The counties with the greatest potential impact for riverine flooding are forecasted for the Lowcountry and the Grand Strand. Rivers in the Upstate have gone down. The Midlands rivers are going down, but there is still some minor flooding. As for Lowcountry and northeastern South Carolina, the rivers have crested, and will take, in some cases, more than three to seven to days to get out of major and moderate flood. This situation presents long term safety concerns for those along the rivers in the northeastern portion of the state. Until the Waccamaw River recedes, Horry County will likely remain in the response phase through the end of the month.
