Josh, please confirm this to be true, but our concerns with First Steps is the agency itself and its accountability/performance, versus any one program under First Steps. The way we broke it up just made more sense, including the consolidation of CDEPP and 4K under the department of Education.

Policy shop,

Any merit to this? Does it benefit us to weigh in?

Haley has recommended dispersing First Steps' responsibilities among various agencies, including giving oversight of all 4K programs to the Education Department?

Is that because she's concerned about the quality of 4K under First Steps? If so, why?
