Good to see you at rga

I want to introduce you to OpenGov. It is something I really think you should take a look at. Here is a link to their site: www.opengov.com.

OpenGov has built the premier web-based financial transparency and business intelligence platform for governments to access, analyze, and share their financial information. Nearly 120 leading cities, counties, universities, school districts, special districts, and state agencies across 20 states use OpenGov to engage their citizens, build trust with their communities, and empower executives to see trends, drill down to vendor payments, and operate to budget. You can see examples at Palo Alto <https://paloalto.opengov.com> and Los Angeles losangeles.opengov.com

The company is advised by Secretary Schultz, Mayor Fenty, Jack Oliver, and executives from Yahoo!, Microsoft, and Intuit.

I've copied OpenGov Vice President of Sales Tim Kane on this email so the two of you can connect directly and arrange for a personalized presentation. In 30 minutes you will see why I think this could be something very helpful to you and the state of south carolina.

You met tim briefly in san diego.

Thanks so much for taking a look. Very interested to see what you think about this.
