South Carolina State Parks

Anyone who has ever hiked around the SC Lowcountry has most likely encountered this prolific species of holly – the Yaupon Holly. This unassuming shrub is well-known for its scientific name, Ilex vomitoria, derived from the Native Americans' use of the berries to make a strong decoction that induced vomiting. Yaupon is the only known caffeinated plant native to North America, and produces an excellent tea from the leaves. Today, there is only one commercial distributor of the tea.

Cody Gillespie If it was used to induce vomiting I'm not sure I would want it in my tea lol

Matthew Sullivan Someone on Linwood has this bush because I saw clippings of it around the holidays...and yes I used it for decorations. Funny thing: the birds do not eat the berries!
