Subject: Health Reform Stories

1-Computing the value of health care in poverty assessments (wow that sounded bureaucratic – highbrow, but bureacratc)

"the government spends almost $8,000 on the average Medicaid beneficiary and more than $12,000 for each person on Medicare. Why shouldn't that count as income?"

http://www.nytimes.com/2012/10/03/business/debating-real-value-of-health-benefits-in-poverty-calculations.html?pagewanted=all&_r=0

2-Welfare reform points the way for Medicaid reform

"Like Medicaid, federal funding for AFDC previously was based on a matching formula, with the federal government giving more to each state the more it spent on the program, effectively paying the states to spend more"

<http://blog.heartland.org/2012/10/obamas-medicaid-plan-exposes-him-as-an-enemy-of-the-poor/>

3-Article falls to the myth that all spending reductions are bad for the system; misses the point that savings can come through efficiencies that actually improve the system

4-Health overhaul to pour billions into insurance industry

5-Point: The folly of fun, free federal funding, forgetting the future and fearlessly facing a fiscal fracas

"Washington has rung up a $16 trillion debt and is running more than $1 trillion in the red annually, even without any of the costs associated with the health-care law"

http://www.kjonline.com/opinion/supreme-court-lets-states-opt-out-of-medicaid-expansion_-they-should_2012-10-06.html

6-Counterpoint: Governors got great gumption or ghastly gall going 'gainst government's giveaway?

"If ever there was a free lunch, this has got to be it"
