Description/Significant Features:

The single-story house Ranch house displays a typical linear floor plan and rests on a brick foundation. Brick veneer clads the building on all sides, and replacement composition shingles top its side-gabled roof. Deep overhanging eaves on the building's facade create a small two-bay porch which is supported by decorative cast iron columns. The building's facade is divisible into four bays. An original open-air carport constitutes the first bay. The remaining bays comprise of a centrally placed replacement door off-centered between replacement windows. An interior brick chimney stack rises from the front roof slope between the door and right window.
