

From: Adam Laxalt <adam=adamlaxaltforag.com@cmail2.com>
To: Veldran, KatherineKatherineVeldran@gov.sc.gov
Date: 8/31/2015 2:05:21 PM
Subject: National Review Online: Nevada AG Adam Laxalt is a Conservative Star in the Making

---

Friends:

It was a privilege discussing our successful Inaugural Basque Fry with National Review and their reporter Alexis Levinson. It my hope we can continue to host candidate events in Nevada to help promote our first-in-the-West presidential contest and our swing-state status.

Here is the National Review story published this morning:

Nevada AG Adam Laxalt is a Conservative Star in the Making

It's the rare state attorney general who, just eight months into his first term in elected office, draws four top-tier presidential candidates across the country to try their luck with voters at a brand-new event, unique in the recent history of Nevada politics and untested in its ability to attract voters. But that is what Laxalt did earlier this month, when he convinced Scott Walker, Ted Cruz, Ben Carson, and Carly Fiorina to travel to Corley Ranch, one hour southeast of Reno at the foot of the Sierra Nevada mountains, to speak at his Inaugural Basque Fry.

It was the clearest manifestation yet of the role Laxalt is carving for himself in Nevada GOP politics. The scion of a legendary state political dynasty, Laxalt is, in part, claiming his family's legacy. But he is also becoming a force in his own right, someone who could shape the future of the Republican party in Nevada.

Be sure to read more from this article here.

Sincerely,

Adam Paul Laxalt
Nevada Attorney General

P.S. Please make sure you are following us on Twitter and that you Like our page on Facebook.

Paid for by Adam Laxalt for Attorney General

FORWARD

---

Preferences | Unsubscribe