Can you see if something like this works for all of the policy and legal folks? They can change it as needed.

As the governor has said time and again, South Carolina will not be a dumping ground for nuclear waste – it's both a quality of life and economic development issue. The federal government owes it to South Carolinians to live up to its promises, and that includes removing waste from our state and paying any required fines.

The governor is solely focused on South Carolina and creating the best possible quality of life for our state. That requires the federal government to live up to the promises they made us but have failed to keep– remove the nuclear waste from South Carolina and pay the required fines.

Good afternoon! I am working on a story about the future of MOX. I've gotten some information from NNSA and from some industry folks, but I would like to get the thoughts of Gov. Haley's office. Obviously she's been outspoken about finishing the project and getting nuclear materials out of the state, but this is a new wrinkle in the nuclear folds with Russia pulling out of the PMDA. I'd like to know how Gov. Haley feels about the Russians leaving and how that affects both MOX and the residents of South Carolina. What does she see or hope to see happening with the facility going forward?
