SUGGESTED TALKING POINTS:

- Good morning. First and foremost, I want to thank you all for attending today's Military Base Task Force meeting.

- South Carolina is a military friendly state. Last year, we were named the most patriotic state in the nation by Movoto Real Estate.
- We're very proud of that ranking, and we're also very proud of the strong military footprint we have here in our state.
- South Carolina's eight major military installations employ a workforce of more than 74,000, generating an impact of more than $19 billion annually.
- More than just an economic driver, however, the service men and women in our state are truly integral members of their respective communities.
- Despite being from many different states and regions, our military personnel are essential members of the greater South Carolina family.
- That's why the mission of the Military Base Task Force is so critical.
- To the military leaders in the room, we will continue to have your back and support you as you work to keep both our state and nation safe.
- I would also like to take a moment to recognize all that our military community did and continues to do in the aftermath of the historic flooding that occurred in October.
- Special thanks goes out to the S.C. National Guard, which has worked tirelessly with us to respond and overcome any and all challenges we've faced over the last few months.
- With that said, I would just like to affirm to you all that you have my support, and I look forward to hearing what you have to say today.
- In South Carolina, we don't just talk about being military-friendly. I want to have your back, so please tell me how we can help you.
- Thank you.
