Holly

I think I may have the wrong email for you. So I'm sending this to your personal email in addition to the DSS email. If you have a new governor's office email let me know. Please see the exchange below between David and I. Hopefully this will discourage them from contacting the office of child support enforcement.

Best regards,

Marc

Thanks Marc. I will pass this along to HP. To clarify, HP just wanted to understand whether it could close it's file on the SC project from an accounting standpoint in light of the upcoming HP/ CSC transaction. HP and SC's interests are completely aligned in believing that there should not be a failed project audit and no clawback.

Hope all is well.

Best regards,

David

David:

I received your voice mail and tried to call your cell phone but I am guessing you were in transit. The State strongly urges HP not to contact OCSE to discuss a failed project audit. At this point, it is not certain OCSE will ever conduct the failed project audit. Even if OCSE does, it cannot accurately determine how much of the HP work ended up being used until it can review a near final version of the system and trace backwards through the artifacts actually used to produce that system.

The State fears HP's contact creating a problem and distraction where none currently exists.

Best regards,

Marc
