KV,

The SEC sent us an updated list of names not in compliance. The new list contains two Commissioners from McCormick. One appointee is one class short and another appointee is two classes short of compliance. I intend to call each appointee to determine whether they are registered/ intend to register for classes in the future.

Thanks,
John

Senator Massey,

Katherine Veldran asked that I contact you. The State Elections Commission has not notified us that any of McCormick's commissioners are out of compliance. New commissioners have 18 months before certification is required. The most recent notice sent to us is current as of June 30, 2013.

We will not send any removal letters to McCormick's commissioners unless the State Elections Commission notifies us otherwise.

Please let me know if I can answer any questions.

John Carroll, Esq.
Office of the Governor
Director of Boards and Commissions

Will you check to see if any of McCormick's election commissioners are about to get kicked off? It may be too late to get them certified, but I'd just like to know.

Thanks.

Shane-- This could be a problem. I think I am the only one certified for McCormick. Part of the problem is that the SCEC classes are not frequent enough to accommodate all of the folks statewide that need training. In addition, they have just announced that they have added even more class requirements for those who were not certified by 1 July 2013.

Don

Greetings, Important new content has been posted on ElectionNet. Please read this content and contact the author if you have any questions. Commission Member Compliance with Training and Certification Program
State law requires board and commission members to complete the training and certification program within eighteen months of appointment or reappointment. If a member does not fulfill the training and certification program requirements, the Governor is required to notify and remove the member from the board unless the member is granted an extension to complete the training based upon exceptional circumstances.

The Governor's Office plans to send letters to commission members who are not compliant with the training and certification program during the first week of September. Directors: please share this information with your commission members.
