Chaney, Rob,

I do still need to know what, if any, impact the emails – most from out of state residents - accusing the Governor of being disingenuous when she shed tears over the Emanuel shootings had on her decision to call for bringing down the Confederate flag.

Also much talk at that time revolved around Haley being a possible VP for the Republican national ticket. Was she, or her staff, concerned about what impact these negative attitudes might have on her possible selection for the VP role?

Thanks,
Doug

Chaney, Rob,

We've looked at the story again, and it indicates that Haley started going over her thoughts about calling for the flag's removal on Friday after the shootings, but we don't see anything addressing the impact of the emails.
