All,

Julie raises a good point.

I will talk to Amy on Tuesday about her time availability to get this done - if the financial audit and other activities present a challenge, we will look at engaging someone to do this for us. I'm not sure what the learning curve is and how quickly a consultant could get up to speed and get it done, but I'll talk to Amy and get back to the group.

Best regards,

Neil

Neil, so great to see all you're doing! Glen and Neil, will the strategies be near to completion soon so they can plug into all of this?, just wasn't sure of the order or necessity of order of all.

One other thought, too, if Amy is unable to make significant headways on getting our financials by activity (due to audit demands) I think this is also well worth looking at what it would cost to get done, or if possible to hire someone to do this. I fear that we'll be unable to untangle all of this if we don't know our true costs for our activities.

Neil:

It is good to see we are moving ahead on this.

Would you please clarify,,, is the 120 days, until report delivery, calendar or working days?

Confidential

Dear Business Opportunities Committee members:

I just wanted to let you know that I am proceeding with PRM Consulting to obtain a quote to provide services to support our "clean slate" look at AAMVA. Mark Heller estimates that he can conduct this effort in about 120 days, including a statement on AAMVA's core mission and core services (with leadership and staff input).

This effort will be underway as soon as possible, and will help the Committee in conducting its activities. At this point, this activity has not been shared with staff.

Best regards,

Neil
