Committee chaired by Leatherman passed $7 million hike for university with ties to senator

The "data warehouse" proviso isn't the only controversial budget proviso that lawmakers will deal with when they are expected to return to Columbia in September to take up the governor's vetoes. Find out more here about a proposal involving a university with ties to powerful state Sen. Hugh Leatherman.

Still Hot

Governor vetoes 'data warehouse' plan, budget earmarks after Nerve coverage

On Friday, Gov. Henry McMaster announced his state budget vetoes for the new fiscal year, including special earmarks sought by a few House members and a controversial plan to create a massive "data warehouse" - all of which The Nerve revealed earlier. Read more about the governor's vetoes here.

How S.C. lawmakers might have access to your private information

Gov. Henry McMaster is now considering whether to veto a pair of state budget provisos dealing with "data warehouses" that contain or could contain private information on many South Carolinians. S.C. lawmakers can have access to these "warehouses." Read more about it here.

What SCDOT isn't telling you about gas-tax-hike projects

Nearly a year after the gas-tax-hike law took effect, the S.C. Department of Transportation hasn't publicly released details about what it plans to do for the state's crumbling roads. Find out here what we learned about the agency's official project list.
