South Carolina State Parks

at 12:47:18 on 5/01/2019 UTC · 🌐

Yesterday at Myrtle Beach State Park, rangers received a call of a hooked sea turtle off the fishing pier. They lowered a drop net down to the turtle and after a few minutes, got the turtle into the net. SCDNR was contacted and the turtle was transported to a sea turtle rehab in Charleston. We hope this turtle can return to the ocean in good health soon! www.southcarolinaparks.com/Myrtle-beach

Caroline Goodman Great job

Chad Powell Youngblood Good work! Was the turtle injured so badly that it couldn't be released? Will the turtle eventually be released?

Shane Mac heavily encrusted with barnacles is never a good sign

at 14:40:03 on 5/01/2019 UTC

Francesca Chapman I don't know much about sea turtles. Why is this a bad sign?

at 14:55:55 on 5/01/2019 UTC

Shane Mac some is normal, even a lot on the larger ones. Indicates lethargy, also noted moss or seagrass. Healthy young ones are more active and get less accumulation
