Description/Significant Features:

The single-story frame Ranch residence was originally constructed as a Ranch style home, but has accumulated significant additions to both its facade (stacked gables) its eastern elevation (frame addition) and western elevation (addition and enclosure of carport), so that it is no longer a true representation of this architectural style. In addition to these many addition the building has also lost all of its original windows and doors.

Alterations (include date(s), if known):

multiple additions (significant alteration of building footprint)
replacement of windows and doors
