

Account: South Carolina State Parks

Content type: Facebook Page - Timeline posts

Record ID: 20120501South-Carolina-State-ParksTimeline-posts52748_10150787925348166

South Carolina State Parks

at 16:47:14 on 5/01/2012 UTC · 🌐

TIDBIT! Flower Petals Carpeting the Trail -- While walking a mountain trail, bits of nature fall all around us, making a display of colors and shapes on the ground that change from week to week. This week there are oak catkins, male pine cones, and leaf bud covers drifting down. Much more colorful are the large tulip poplar flowers, plopping to the ground all green, yellow and orange. The mountain laurel flowers are ahead of schedule, like so much else this year, and are already floating down, each looking like a delicate pink and white tea cup. These will fade and give way to summertime flowers, fall leaves and seeds, all falling to the ground at the proper time, as the seasons go round and round.

