ACL expands program for aging and disability community-based networks to strengthen partnerships with the health care sector in 11 communities

Non-profits to learn critical business skills, create a learning collaborative

Building on a successful pilot project, ACL is expanding its program to improve integration between hospitals, insurers, health care providers and the community-based organizations (CBOs) that often provide day-to-day support to older people and people with disabilities.

The Business Acumen Targeted Technical Assistance Program, offered in partnership with The John A. Hartford Foundation and The SCAN Foundation, has selected 11 networks to form a learning collaborative and receive training in marketing, contracting, and pricing the services they provide to older adults and individuals with disabilities.

In addition to training, the networks share experiences, including lessons learned, innovative ideas, and best practices for providing integrated care in a variety of community settings. Tip sheets and webinars from the pilot project are now available to other organizations, and more tools will be added over time.
