The East Edisto Conservancy: preserving the rural

As we look to the future of East Edisto, our goal is to preserve the rural character of the land. The East Edisto Conservancy has been created to oversee a residential density restriction. The entity will be governed by a five-person board with a majority of members representing significant environmental groups and the remaining members representing East Edisto land owners. The Conservancy will be empowered to manage the density restriction with complete autonomy and will remain with the land in perpetuity.

By limiting residential density on up to three quarters of East Edisto's land, and promoting traditional uses (namely farming, timber, hunting and equestrian), we are helping to preserve the rural character of this land for many years to come.
