What do you think? Did a broken tree branch or a woodpecker cause the damage to this historic glass pane at Redcliffe Plantation State Historic Site?

Tim Hosch branch

Peter Bendal Kear Looks to me like something hit the window hard enough to crack it yet not break it open. Could have been a branch, bird, rock from a mower, or any of a number of things. I don't think a woodpecker landed and used it's beak though as there is not much to grab onto.

Helen Diamond Not enough information to make an educated guess. ...

at 17:39:06 on 3/08/2016 UTC

Susan Gleason Cole Woodpecker!

at 17:40:48 on 3/08/2016 UTC

Robert Preston Which was laying on the ground below the window ?

at 18:28:03 on 3/08/2016 UTC

Patricia Eastwood Wood pecker !!

at 19:08:53 on 3/08/2016 UTC

Lisa Mixson The woodpeckwr pecked the branch and then it fell and broke the glass. Both caused it ,I'm guessing. At first I thought my screen was cracked on my tablet. Lol

South Carolina State Parks If you said it was done by the woodpecker, you are absolutely right. The window in our historic homes face window damage by birds who fly into them!

South Carolina State Parks Great point!
at 21:04:26 on 3/08/2016 UTC

Helen Diamond Wow. .that's a hard hit! !
at 21:33:44 on 3/08/2016 UTC

Jenny McMillan That's a hard hit. Sorry for the bird and the window!
at 22:07:47 on 3/08/2016 UTC

Stephen Dailey I would have said the Woodpecker anyway. I thought that he may have killed a branch.

Chuck Combs Today i saw a red headed woodpecker really making a racket pecking on a metal top to a security light. I guess he was not too smart because he did it several times and did not find any bugs.
