South Carolina State Parks

at 18:18:49 on 7/08/2021 UTC

It's always creepin' around -- Poison Ivy! Ranger Scott from Table Rock is here to tell you how to identify it, why it makes you itch and what to do if you come in contact with this plant. All helpful information!

Poison Ivy - What You Need to Know

Ken Cothran I know it was not within the mission of the state park per se, but I wish he had said something about how you can safely get rid of this vine or shrub if you find it in your yard.

Ann W-Fitz Ken Cothran yes! But apparently it was at that building where they made the video and they didn't get rid of it.....hmmmm

Rachel Neely My doctor told me years ago..if you make contact with poison ivy take a shower with ivory liquid soap. It will remove the oil from your skin.

Layla Elizabeth Manning The last time I got poison ivy it took me THREE MONTHS to get rid of it! I had to get multiple rounds of steroid shots and prescription meds. Miserable!

Susan Creamer Good info, Ranger Scott! So important for folks to be able to recognize it!!

Gillian Winzinger I've never paid much attention to poison ivy because I've never had a reaction to it, but my son is SO allergic to it. When he'd go stay with my parents as a kid, I'd pack him poison ivy soap, benadryl, Cortizone, the whole works. I kind of had the feeling he just rolled in it every time they went fishing.

Don Klawitter Great video Scott! Been dealing with it for four days now. Went and got a steroid shot yesterday. No fun that's for sure!!!

Art Watts I've had this many times and used everything from the pharmacy that was purchased over the counter . White vinegar will dry it up and stop the itch and it costs next to nothing.
