Subject: RE: ETV, education funding

---

The Governor's position in ETV funding is clearly laid out in the FY 2013-14 Executive Budget. The Governor continues to support a user-funded model that focuses on those services most needed by the state such as roles fulfilled in educational content delivery, emergency management, transparency, and law enforcement training.

Thoughts?

Hey Rob,

I hope you're well.

I wanted to check in with you about the ETV story I'm writing for tomorrow's paper and whether the governor would like to share her position on the agency's funding.

I see that she recommended no change in funding to ETV in her executive budget. In news reports last year, she mentioned the agency running more efficiently.

Still, she has vetoed their budget in the past, and has said ETV should be privately, not publicly funded.

The agency presented its budget request to Senate Finance last week.

Jamie
