The flag has already been taken down from the dome. Did a survey track how many killings this action reduced?

Will there be a burning of SC History textbooks?

Will there be a record kept of the reduction in killings and compared to this time next year?

I have been thrilled to study with by 5 year old grandson, learning of the civil war history.

How will the removal of the flag be enough action to reduce killings? Or is it just to appease one group?

Simple actions using less energy in a more constructive manner could bring better results.

Truly removal of one piece of cloth from historical setting will not bring about change in killings.

Reach those, teach those to change thought patterns and actions. Provide constant vigilance and activities to reach those who have unused time on their hands.
