Mr. Varat,

I've scanned the photos and from what I could see, the bottom half of the cane was not present in either.

The plaque was also not visible on it either.

Please let me know if I can do anything else for you.

Best,

Nicholas Doyle

Mr. Blessing, thanks again for your help on Thursday. I wonder if your staff would look again at the image from the 1930s and see if the base plaque is visible. I failed to note it, and it will be interesting either way but especially if it's not there.

Ms. Bilderback, thanks. I'm having a little trouble with the databases, but I'll keep trying. Would y'all be able to pull these items by Thursday? I really appreciate it.

Mr. Varat,

I don't know of anything off the top of my head, but I can check once I am back in the office on Friday. There are a couple of online databases for newspapers you can access. The Library of Congress has Chronicling America and there is NewspaperArchive as well. These will access newspapers in other towns like Charleston and Greenville. We have some of our Columbia photographs digitized and available online. I did a quick subject search of our online catalog for "capitols—south Carolina". There are a number of hits with some falling in your time period. However, without pulling them, I do not know if the statue appears or not. You are welcome to come over and request to see them yourself before Friday. The postcards listed in the search are currently out for digitization, so we would need advance notice of your visit to pull them.

Yours,
Beth

Dear Ms. Bilderback, I work for Lt. Governor Bryant, and I'm writing to ask if y'all might have a picture of the north side of the Statehouse and dated between 1908 and 1915 that shows the Washington statue with an intact cane? You may know of the story that the cane was repaired in 1908-09 but then was damaged again sometime over the next few years, and supposedly by then Governor Cole Blease. I asked for microfilm of The State for those years, hoping for a quick discovery, but that isn't happening, so I thought I'd just ask directly. I'd appreciate any help you can provide.
