Don't Miss: Communicating Reform, Bridging the Access Gap and Building Trust in the Classroom at #EIE14

Register Today for 2014 National Summit on Education Reform

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. - Former Florida Governor Jeb Bush and the Foundation for Excellence in Education (@Excelined) today announced the 2014 National Summit on Education Reform will feature conversations about lessons learned, the latest innovations, and proven policies for improving K-12 student achievement.

On November 20-21, former Governor Bush, chairman of the Foundation for Excellence in Education, will host the organization's seventh annual marquee education event. On November 21, three separate strategy sessions, composed of some of the world's leading experts, will take on issues relating to: delivering effective messages, providing students with access to high quality courses, and protecting student data privacy and security.

The sessions will feature panelists covering some of the hottest topics and latest innovations in education:

- Join Communicating Reform Part 2: Delivering effective messages to hear advice from experienced professionals on being heard, getting published, and maximizing every opportunity to share your reform message.
- During the strategy session Bridging the Access Gap: How to bring the best courses to every student, in every state, attendees will learn how to pass, set up and successfully implement Course Access programs in their own states, drawing on lessons learned from states implementing Course Access.
- In Building Trust in the Classroom: Protecting student data privacy and security, hear panelists discuss student privacy as schools increase their use of digital technology and broadband networks. This exciting use of technology supports teaching and learning, but also raises important questions about how data is used, protected and shared.

Governor Bush will open the summit with a morning keynote address on November 20. Our summit will feature discussions with a range of national and international leaders, covering some of the important topics and latest innovations in education, all focused on how to unlock student achievement through more choice and accountability.

Registration is now open, and space is going fast. For event details and to register, visit ExcelinEd.org/National-Summit. Stay tuned for more announcements on the Summit's exciting agenda in the coming weeks. Members of the media interested in covering the two-day event must request credentials in advance of the start of the summit. Media registration will open online on Thursday, November 6, 2014.
